The Galápagos Islands, Read in Order of Age

A field guide to Galápagos cruises, land journeys and wildlife, island by island

PREPARED FOR

Jane Traveler

TRAVELER FOLIO · JW-F-0001

A LETTER BEFORE YOU GO

Dear Jane,

I first came here in 1991, and I still remember the feeling: I was Darwin. A small airport, a handful of boats in the whole archipelago, no guide at my elbow, and almost no one else going. You stepped off the panga and the islands simply carried on, sea lions asleep on the landing, boobies nesting on the path, a hawk close enough to touch, none of them the least bit bothered by us.

I've kept going back ever since, and the reason hasn't changed. The animals still don't care that we're there. The rock is still being made in the west and worn down in the east, so every island is a different chapter. And every time I go, I see something I walked straight past the time before. It's the one place I know where you come home more curious than when you left.

Today far more people come, so how you go matters. Small ships, the right season, and a naturalist who has been doing this for decades. That's what this guide is for. Start with the rock, read the islands oldest to youngest, and the wildlife makes sense.

This guide is page one of your Folio. Mark it up. Circle what makes you grin. Cross out what doesn't. When we talk, I'll already know which kind of traveler you are.

J. Wild CHIEF EXPEDITION OFFICER · FIRST LANDED 1991

I KEEP GOING BACK
since 1991

	1991, when I first came	Today
VISITORS	Fewer than 50,000 a year (early 1990s)	About 330,000 a year (2023)
THE WAY IN	A small airport and a handful of boats	Daily flights, busy harbour towns and a long list of licensed ships
THE ANIMALS	Unafraid	Still unafraid. That's the miracle.

How to read the marks in this guide

Every place, ship and lodge carries one stamp from the Ledger. It tells you exactly how well we know it. Nothing gets a stamp it hasn't earned.

I KNOW A PLACE I slept here	James has stayed there himself.	I'VE WALKED IT vetted on foot	Inspected in person, every path and room.
I KEEP GOING BACK founder favourite	The places James returns to on his own time.	I KNOW THE HOST the house patches you in	A personal introduction comes with the booking.
I KNOW WHO KNOWS partner vetted	Vetted through a partner we trust, like Royal Galapagos.	I'LL KNOW SOON well worth the visit	On James's list. Recommended, honestly marked.

A conveyor belt you can stand on

◀ YOUNGER · WEST · well under a million years

OLDER · EAST · roughly 3-4 million years ▶

The oldest residents keep the slowest schedule. Take the hint.

Wildlife without fear

Animals here evolved without hunters on land, and they still behave like it. You'll step around sea lions, not stalk them.

Geology you can read

Old islands in the east are worn and green; young ones in the west are black lava and still active. Sail one to the other and you watch the place being made.

A park that says no

The National Park sets every landing and time. Fewer people at each site, a naturalist with every group, and rules that keep it this way.

DECEMBER – MAY

The warm season

Warmer water, calmer seas, green highlands and short showers. The snorkeler's choice.

JUNE – NOVEMBER

The garúa season

The Humboldt Current brings cool water, misty mornings and the richest marine life. Rougher crossings, livelier wildlife.

Wildlife timing is approximate and varies by year; your naturalist confirms on the day.

A pile of marine iguanas. The collective noun is a mess. Accurate.

Most Galápagos regrets are about time, not money. People fly a long way, see one route, and spend the flight home wondering about the other islands. We'd rather you stayed.

That's why the house sets a three-night minimum on land, and why our offers reward staying longer rather than booking sooner.

Three nights or don't bother. Night one you unpack. Night two you notice. Night three the place starts talking.

Rules of the Road

01 The smaller the boat, the bigger the sea. First ashore, last back.

02 Read a place in the order it was written. Old islands first.

03 Arrive the day before the day before. Mainland flights run late; ships don't wait.

04 Contrast beats coverage. Land, then sea. You'll feel the change.

Words we've struck out

~~LUXURY CRUISE~~ — It's a yacht with sixteen guests and a naturalist who knows every sea lion by its scars.

~~HIDDEN GEM~~ — Nothing here is hidden. It's protected. Different thing.

~~ONCE IN A LIFETIME~~ — Most of our guests come back. I

Giant tortoises at feeding time. Slower than you think, and grumpier.

What to know, and what not to expect

Getting there

Fly to Guayaquil or Quito, then on to Baltra or San Cristóbal. Plan a night on the mainland first.

Fees at the door

Galápagos National Park entrance fee `[US$200 adult, confirm]` and Transit Control Card `[US$20, confirm]`.

Fitness

Wet landings from pangas, uneven lava, short hikes in the sun. Tell us about knees and backs; we'll match the route.

Pack

Reef-safe sunscreen, a brimmed hat with a strap, water shoes, a light layer for garúa mornings, a dry bag, and a long lens if you have one.

What not to expect

~~CASINO~~	The only gamble is whether the penguins show up.
~~FORMAL NIGHTS~~	Dress code: dry by dinner.
~~YOUR OWN LANDING TIMES~~	The Park sets the clock. Everyone keeps it.
~~HAND-FEEDING~~	Two metres from wildlife. The animals didn't get the memo.
~~STRONG WI-FI~~	Limited at sea `[confirm]`. Post the photos at home.

Straight answers

Sea or land first time? Sea reaches more; land sleeps better. The Contrast does both.

Solo? Welcome on both. Ask about the single supplement.

Children? Strong fit. Age guidance `[confirm per program]`.

Jane, that's the Galápagos as I've come to know it since 1991. Circle what moves you, cross out what doesn't, and send it back to me. I'll read every mark and call you with a plan built around them. The islands have waited a few million years. They can wait for you to get it right.
