01 · WHEN TO GO

Where to be, month by month

December to April is dry and sunny on the Pacific side. May to November is the green season: afternoon rain, roaring waterfalls, turtles, whales and fewer people.

January
MONTEVERDE

Quetzal season begins. The bird is real; your guide knows which tree.

February
CARIBBEAN COAST

The Caribbean side dries out. Reef, reggae and nobody on the beach.

March
GUANACASTE

The sunniest month in the northwest. Pack sunscreen like you mean it.

April
ARENAL

Last of the dry season. Easter week is busy: book early or go late.

May PACUARE

First rains, first green. The forest exhales.

June
PACUARE RIVER

The rivers rise and the rafting gets lively. Hold on.

July
PACIFIC COAST

The "little summer" on the Pacific, and green turtles begin nesting.

August
UVITA

Humpbacks offshore in the morning, waterfalls in the afternoon.

September
CARIBBEAN COAST

The Pacific gets soaked; the Caribbean smiles. Go east.

October
TORTUGUERO

Turtle hatchlings sprint for the sea. The quietest month, and the best-kept secret.

November
OSA PENINSULA

Shoulder season: fewer people, fair weather, good rates.

December
EVERYWHERE

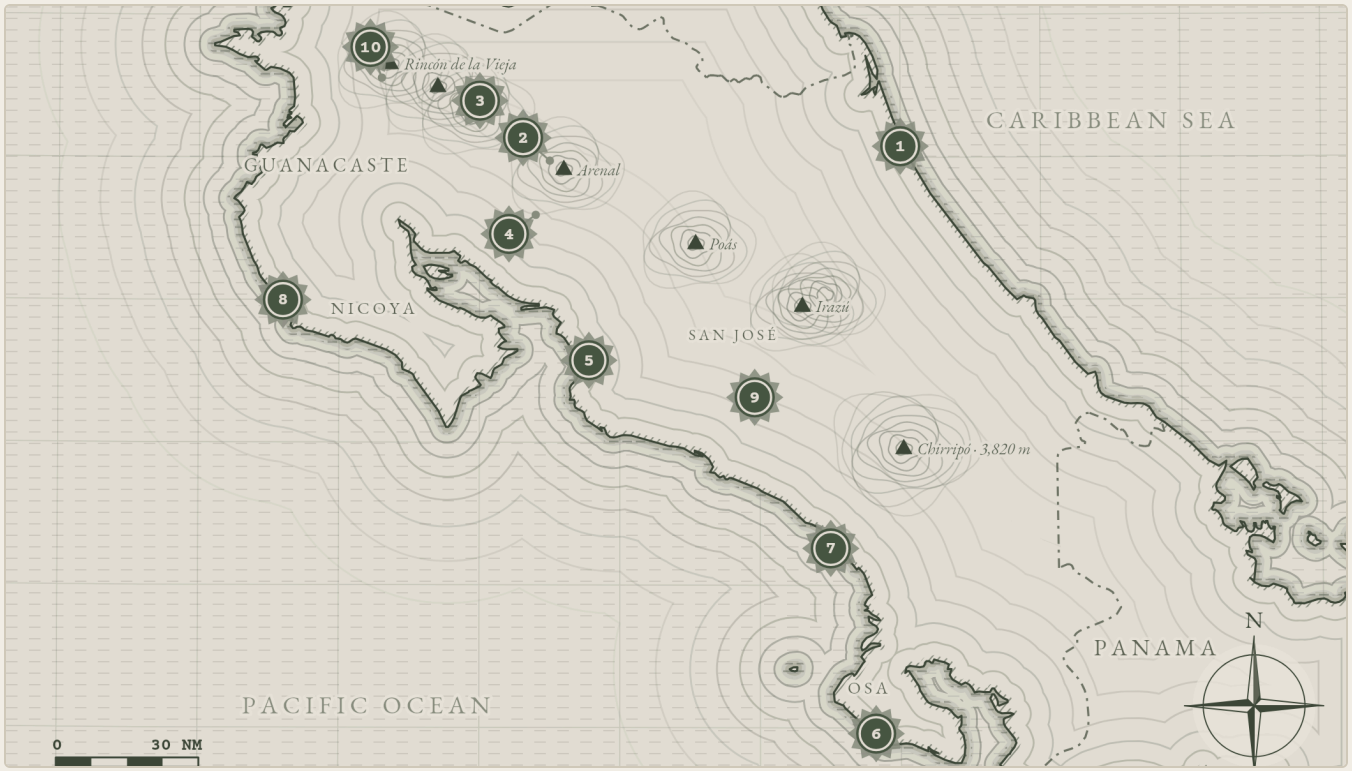

Dry season returns, and so does everyone. We booked your room in June.

Ten places, one map

The ones I'd send my own family to. Numbers match the map; circle yours and tell Iggi.

1. Tortuguero canals — CARIBBEAN COAST
   No roads, all canals. Turtles nest July to October; caimans work the day shift.

2. Arenal's hot river — LA FORTUNA
   A volcano-warmed river where the locals soak for free. Nature's jacuzzi, no booking required.

3. Río Celeste — TENORIO VOLCANO NATIONAL PARK
   Where two rivers meet and turn sky-blue. It looks retouched. It isn't.

4. Monteverde hanging bridges — CLOUD FOREST
   Walk the canopy at cloud level. Go early; the quetzals don't do crowds.

5. Tárcoles River bridge — CENTRAL PACIFIC
   Dozens of crocodiles posing below. The best free photo op that can also eat you.

6. Corcovado, Sirena station — THE OSA PENINSULA
   The wildest walk in Central America. Tapirs, macaws and mud to the knee.

7. The whale's tail — MARINO BALLENA, UVITA
   At low tide the sandbar draws a whale's tail. The real ones swim past in season.

8. Ostional arribadas — NICOYA PENINSULA
   On arribada nights, thousands of olive ridley turtles come ashore together. Nature's flash mob.

9. Tarrazú coffee farms — LOS SANTOS HIGHLANDS
   The best cup of your life, poured by the person who picked it.

10. Rincón de la Vieja — GUANACASTE
    Bubbling mud pots and steaming vents. The volcano smells faintly of breakfast eggs.

The rest, in short

GIVE SPACE TO
